The port city in the state of Andhra Pradesh also known as the steel city is Visakhapatnam. Vizag, another popular name for the city, has the hill ranges of Eastern Ghats on its West and the magnificent beaches of the Bay of Bengal on the East; a comprehensive tourist package. The beauty of the place has given it another apt and succinct sobriquet, the Jewel of the East Coast. The city was popular during the British Raj with the name of its railway station Waltair; now the name of the area around the railway station.

Visakhapatnam though an industrial city has incomparable scenic splendor with exotic beaches like the Dolphin Nose. It has green hills and valleys lined next to the vast untouched shoreline. It has shrines dedicated to most of the religions of the world; Hindu temples, Buddhist shrines and Christian Churches can be found on the same hill range. The city is home to the prestigious Andhra University and the Eastern Naval Command Headquarters of the Indian Navy.
